SHELTON, Conn. – Kimberly A. Macauley, a biology major at Boston College in Newton, Mass., has been awarded the 2006 Connecticut Resources Recovery Authority Shelton Scholarship.

The $1,000 CRRA Shelton Scholarship is awarded annually to one Shelton resident studying engineering or the sciences at an accredited four-year college. Preference is given to a student with a declared major in the environmental or energy fields.

Macauley is in the middle of her junior year at Boston College, where she carries a 3.86 GPA (on a 4.0 scale). She plans to declare environmental studies as a minor. She is a graduate of St. Joseph High School in Trumbull.
